The EPA Services Division considers that the LD Response to Submissions document is adequate to enable the Environmental Protection Authority (EPA) to prepare its draft assessment report. This follows a period of consultation between Reward and the EPA Services Division after the end of the public review period and the recent site visit on the 1st August (see picture left). Reward’s responses to comments received from members of the public and regulatory agencies during the 6-week exhibition of Reward’s Environmental Review Document (ERD) will soon be published on the EPA website.

Whilst the EPA’s advice does not imply that LD has been assessed to be environmentally acceptable, Reward believes that this is a significant positive step forward. It is anticipated that the Company will meet with the EPA board to consider the proposal before the end of October 2019.

CEO Greg Cochran commented: “the board and the team at Reward are pleased to have received this notification from the EPA. It is another positive step in this very thorough public permitting process.”

“Once again I wish to acknowledge the efforts of the regulators within EPA Services as well as Reward’s team of employees and its group of highly experienced environmental consultants who have enabled the Company to get to this juncture. They have put in an enormous effort over the last four years.”

Yours faithfully
